Dear Student,

Welcome and congratulations on your accomplishment! Let me assure you that the steps taken that led you to either continuing your education at KCC or entering KCC for the first time is an accomplishment and a reason to give yourself a pat on the back. You made a choice and carried through with it. It is a great reason to be proud of yourself. Believe it or not, if you feel joy while thinking about this, it is a sign of good health and a very good prognosis for a successful outcome of your academic career. If you still doubt whether it is worthwhile, that’s okay.

Take my word for it, it is worthwhile and you are great for doing it. There is no more joy than accepting and celebrating who you are and caring about how you feel. Everything is a choice. Make one that leads to a joyful life and it will result in great success. We are happy to have you come and chat about whatever it is that you have in mind. We listen and we care.

Have a joyful and successful semester!

Director of Counseling and Health Services
Your mind and body are powerful pieces of who you are. Both your mind and your body have the ability to impact your daily functioning. And guess what?! How you think impacts how you feel. The more positive thoughts you have the more positive your body feels.

On the other hand, the more negative thoughts that you have the more negative your body feels. In addition, the more negative thoughts that you hold, the more susceptible your body is to the negative impacts of stress.

As per the Merriam Webster dictionary the mind is defined as the part of a person that thinks, reasons, feels, and remembers. When we think about the mind we may begin to understand that our mind includes our overall feelings of wellness and feelings of overall health. In addition to the existence of our minds, research has shown that our brains produce substances that can improve our health. These substances include endorphins, which can act as natural painkillers.

Research shows that what our brain produces depends in part on our thoughts, feelings, and expectations. If you’re sick but you have hope and a positive attitude and you believe that you have the ability to get better, your brain is likely to produce chemicals that will boost your body’s healing power.

What does this mean for you as a Kingsborough college student? This means that if you feel positive and hopeful these feelings of positivity and hopefulness can positively impact your overall sense of well-being, your studies and your overall college experience. One technique that is helpful for college students to begin to practice is a technique called positive self-talk. Practice positive self-talk, start by following one simple rule: Don’t say anything to yourself that you wouldn’t say to anyone else. Be gentle and encouraging with yourself. If a negative thought enters your mind, evaluate it and respond with affirmations of what is good about you.

Begin using this one strategy and remember to be kind to yourself, and with that kindness remember that with each kind word that you speak to yourself internally you are improving your mind-body experience. We are what we think!

Every one of us can think of strategies to increase our positive energy! Feel free to stop by D-102 and drop your creative ideas to encourage positive thoughts into our positive thoughts jar! We will share some of your techniques and strategies in our next newsletter!
You’ve been to the workshop on Title IX (9) and saw the information cards around the campus. You feel a knot in your stomach as you realize that you can relate to some of what was said. Going out with that guy from English class seemed like a good idea at the time, but something went horribly wrong. He didn’t listen when you said “No.” You feel like you were sexually assaulted but he acts as if everything is fine. You wonder if you’re the one who has it all wrong, but that awful feeling inside remains.

You think about dropping the class or leaving the college all together. The last thing you want is to see him in your class and around the campus. You wonder if he has done this to someone else or could do this to someone else. You want to say something, but you wonder if you do, if you will be believed. You understand that under Title IX, reports of sexual assault, harassment, and other unwelcome sexual behavior are taken very seriously on CUNY campuses and that there are people you can speak to about it, but the thought of doing so is uncomfortable. You see an opening when your professor notices a change in you and is concerned about your slipping grades. She asks if everything is okay. You open your mouth to speak, but cannot bring yourself to say the words. If you can relate to this scenario, you are not alone. According to the U.S. Department of Justice’s National Crime Victimization Survey (NCVS)—there is an average of 237,868 victims (age 12 or older) of rape and sexual assault each year. This number may be even higher if we consider the reality that many cases of rape and sexual assaults are not reported. This may be due to a variety of reasons including feelings of shame or self-blame, concerns about not being believed, fear of retaliation or uncertainty about if what happened was a reportable offense.

Sexual assault is any sexual contact that occurs without your consent. It can happen to anyone regardless of age, gender, sexual orientation, race, religion or economic status. Perpetrators can be strangers or people you know such as a friend, an acquaintance, a date, a partner, a relative, or someone in a position of authority.

If you have been sexually assaulted or harassed, it is important to know that help is available. If the incident happened on campus, contact any one of the following: Public Safety, the Office of the Vice President of Student Affairs, or the Title IX Coordinator. They can help you to get medical attention and/or explore your next steps including reporting options and connecting with resources for emotional support.

If the sexual assault occurred off campus, call 911 or go to your local NYPD precinct. You may also choose to contact any of the following KCC offices for assistance: Public Safety, the Office of the Vice President of Student Affairs, or the Title IX Coordinator. It is very important that you seek medical attention to treat any injuries and preserve evidence of the assault. Some hospitals have Sexual Assault Forensic Examiners (SAFE) who are specially trained to handle such cases as well as Emergency Room advocates and social workers to provide you with emotional support.

Mental Health Counselor (MHC, LMHC): Mental health counseling is a distinct profession with national standards for education, training and clinical practice. Mental health counselors are highly-skilled professionals who provide flexible, consumer-oriented therapy. They combine traditional psychotherapy with a practical, problem-solving approach that creates a dynamic and efficient path for change and problem resolution.

American Mental Health Counselors Association (AMHCA): http://www.amhca.org/
New York State Office of Professions (Licensing Requirements): http://www.op.nysed.gov/prof

Psychologist (MA, PhD, Psy.D): Some psychologists have a master's degree (M.A. or M.S.) in psychology while others have a doctoral degree (Ph.D., Psy.D., or Ed.D.) in clinical, educational, counseling, or research psychology. Most states license psychologists to practice psychology. They can provide psychological testing, evaluations, treat emotional and behavioral problems and mental disorders, and provide psychotherapy.

Psychiatrist: a psychiatrist is a physician with a doctor of medicine (M.D.) degree or osteopathic (D.O.) degree, with at least four more years of specialized study and training in psychiatry. Psychiatrists are licensed as physicians to practice medicine by individual states. "Board certified" psychiatrists have passed the national examination administered by the American Board of Psychiatry and Neurology. Psychiatrists provide medical and psychiatric evaluations, treat psychiatric disorders, provide psychotherapy, and prescribe and monitor medications.

Psychiatric Nurse: Psychiatric/mental health nurses may have various degrees ranging from associate’s to bachelor’s (B.S.N.) to master’s (M.S.N. or A.P.R.N) to doctoral (D.N.Sc., Ph.D.). Depending on their level of education and licensing, they provide a broad range of psychiatric and medical services, including the assessment and treatment of psychiatric illnesses, case management, and psychotherapy. In some states, some psychiatric nurses may prescribe and monitor medication.

Social Worker (MSW, LMSW, LCSW. PhD.): Social workers have either a bachelor’s degree (B.A., B.S., or B.S.W.), a master’s degree (M.A., M.S., M.S.W., or M.S.S.W), or doctoral degree (D.S.W. or Ph.D.). In most states, social workers take an examination to be licensed to practice social work (L.M.S.W.,L.C.S.W. or L.I.C.S.W.), and the type of license depends on their level of education and practice experience. Social workers provide various services including assessment and treatment of psychiatric illnesses, case management, hospital discharge planning, and psychotherapy.
Dear Students,

Life is full of beginnings, middles and endings. Amongst these chapters is college life. As you enter the fall semester, take a look around. Whether it’s taking a walk along Manhattan Beach, grabbing lunch at the cafeteria or passing by our aquarium, decide for yourself what kind of experience you wish to have this semester. Would you like to have better grades? A better job? Healthier relationships? Motivation and time management? A lot depends on your state of mind and how you approach your challenges. While changes may not spark in the blink of an eye, there is no better time than now to begin to notice the small and meaningful experiences that help you to develop who you are. That is of course only when you decide to challenge yourself!

When we begin to approach life from a place of self-empowerment, confidence and optimism, we are more capable of reaching our goals. Better grades and healthier choices are attainable and sustainable; our connections with others are deeper and more genuine.

With this in mind this semester, I would like to invite you to visit our Counseling Services in D-102. Our counselors are highly qualified in helping you identify your goals, listen to you in a safe and non-judgmental environment and empower you to develop healthy relationships. Our counselors can facilitate the changes that you have been wishing for. Sometimes a little support and guidance can begin the process of transformation.

Come to our Open House to meet and greet our counselors and graduate interns. We are excited to present to you our many resources, from individual and confidential counseling to events such as national depression screening, de-stressing for finals and eating disorder screening day. You are welcome to join us this fall semester and begin a new chapter in your life – with happier, healthier and a more confident you!

Best regards, Ilona Fridson, Outreach Coordinator
