"What Time Is It? A Transnational Black Feminist Moment"

Black Feminist Film Screening and Discussion

Thursday, March 25th, 12-2pm

BLACK FEMINIST is a lively and illuminating documentary film that explores the double-edged sword of racial and gender oppression that Black Women face in America.

Join us after the film for a talk, "What Time Is It? A Transnational Black Feminist Moment" with Dr. Margo Okazawa-Rey, an activist, scholar, and professor working on issues of militarism, armed conflict, and violence against women examined intersectionally as well as a member of the historic Black feminist Combahee River Collective.

Introductory remarks by National Women’s Studies Association President Karsonya (Kay) Wise Whitehead and Brooklyn College Women’s and Gender Studies Coordinator Dr. Namulundah Florence.

Sponsored by the Student Union and Intercultural Center and the Women’s and Gender Studies Program at KCC. Offered as part of KCC’s Women’s History Month programming.

Co-Sponsored by Kingsborough Women’s Center, National Women’s Studies Association, the Feminist Press, Women’s Studies Quarterly, the Center for the Study of Women and Society, Women’s and Gender Studies at the Graduate Center, WGS at Brooklyn College, WGS and LGBTQ Studies at Queens College, WGS at Hunter College, the Center for the Humanities, and the Center for LGBTQ Studies at the Grad Center.

Questions? Contact hossam@kbcc.cuny.edu or redd.washburn@kbcc.cuny.edu

Offered as part of KCC Women’s History Month Programming.