

THE REVOLUTION WILL BE BACKWARD DESIGNED
THE PROMISE AND PRACTICE OF INCLUSIVE TEACHING
JANUARY 29, 2020
V-219, TERRACE ROOM
12 - 4 PM

This workshop will lay out the history, current state, and a future path toward inclusive pedagogical practices. Participants will discuss: the history of exclusion as a means to understanding the present, a vision of what equity in education looks like, and how we all shape equitable futures.

This workshop will be facilitated by Dr. Bryan Dewsbury, Assistant Professor of Biology at The University of Rhode Island. Bryan is also a Fellow with the John N. Gardner Institute where he focuses on inclusive curriculum design, Principal Investigator of the Science Education And Society (SEAS) research program, and co-PI of the URI Minority Access to Research Careers (URI MARC) program.
