Frequently Asked Questions

What do Corps Members do?

Repair the World Service Corps Members volunteer while learning and reflecting with their peers through training led by national leaders in the field. There will be an intentional focus on food insecurity, education justice, housing access, and criminal justice reform and immigration justice through meaningful service rooted in Jewish values.

Do I have to be Jewish to be a Corps Member?

No, you do not. The Repair the World Service Corps is an initiative that works to address the needs of all members of the community in which we work. Typically, between 30% and 60% of our Repair the World Service Corps is made up of non-Jewish identifying individuals. The Jewish Service Alliance is explicitly looking to build a cohort that reflects the multitude of identities that exists within both the New York City and Jewish communities. Applicants who identify as BIPOC, Jews of Color, lesbian, gay, bisexual, trans and non-binary people; and differently abled people are highly encouraged to apply.

What are “Learning Sessions”?

Each week, the Repair the World Service Corps (Both Service Members and Bridge Builders) attend two online learning sessions with their fellow Corps Members. The Local session is with their local borough cohort and is used as time to reflect and decompress with your fellow volunteers in the city as well as time to learn about local city issues and topics. The National session is with our national team where they will get the opportunity to hear discussions and learn from nationally recognized educators, community leaders, and other notable speakers.
